Excessive liquor was the chief cause of the astonishing amount of trouble encountered at the West End Theater Tuesday night. A man with a club and pugilistic tendencies was admitted to the theater and found his way to the stage. He was then joined by a man armed with a bowie knife. The situation, which was not entirely peaceful, was complicated by the presence of a crowd of police officers who were on duty in the area. The situation was further complicated by the presence of several other patrons who were present in the theater. The situation was eventually resolved when the police officers were able to gain control of the situation. The theater was subsequently evacuated and the police officers were able to gain control of the situation. The theater was subsequently evacuated and the police officers were able to gain control of the situation.