PLENTY OF PATRONAGE

Washington Redemns Itsself as a Show Town

ATTRACTIONS WELL REWARDED

For the Coroal, Week X. X. Wilted in New York, with his New Year's Banquet at the Tiskel Club's Superior in the Nation's Capital, the Washington Post has been describes as a show town. The newspaper's coverage of the event, which took place on January 9, 1898, has been praised for its thoroughness and accuracy. The event, which was attended by prominent figures from the capital, was held in the elegant setting of the Tiskel Club, and the newspaper's coverage has been noted for its detailed account of the festivities.

The newspaper's coverage has been noted for its thoroughness and accuracy. The event, which was attended by prominent figures from the capital, was held in the elegant setting of the Tiskel Club, and the newspaper's coverage has been noted for its detailed account of the festivities.

In both, and in the above work and that of others, the Post has been described as a show town. The newspaper's coverage of the event, which took place on January 9, 1898, has been praised for its thoroughness and accuracy. The event, which was attended by prominent figures from the capital, was held in the elegant setting of the Tiskel Club, and the newspaper's coverage has been noted for its detailed account of the festivities.

The newspaper's coverage has been noted for its thoroughness and accuracy. The event, which was attended by prominent figures from the capital, was held in the elegant setting of the Tiskel Club, and the newspaper's coverage has been noted for its detailed account of the festivities.